

Oxfam GB commissioned survey on the impact of the economic boycott of the Palestinian Authority on Palestinians and their essential services

Survey carried out 12-19 March 2007 by The Palestinian Centre for Public Opinion. The samples were drawn from Nablus, Ramallah, Bethlehem, East Jerusalem, Hebron, Jericho, Tulkarem, Tubas and Qualqilya in the West Bank and Gaza City, Khan Younis and Jabalya in Gaza.

Survey 1 of 677 adults in cities in (WB 398, GS 279)

356 of those surveyed have received salary or social welfare payments through the TIM (WB 224, GS 132)

Survey 2 of 67 senior managers from hospitals, schools and other sectors were interviewed

Background: Following the January 2006 election of Hamas the Quartet and government of Israel adopted an economic boycott of the Palestinian Authority government. To ease the suffering of the Palestinian people and avoid collapse of essential public institutions the Quartet introduced an alternative funding mechanism that would bypass the Hamas led PA. The Temporary International Mechanism (TIM) was announced by the quartet in June 2006 but many schemes started September/Dec 2006.

Justification: There are a considerable volume of official indicators and anecdotes from Palestinians about the impact of the financial boycott and the effectiveness of the TIM. This research aimed to gather evidence concerning the financial blockade of the Palestinian Authority and the use of the TIM.

Methodology

A face to face interview using a structured questionnaire administered to 60-70 key informants in the upper management cadre of essential Palestinian public sector institutions (hospitals, municipalities, schools, water utilities, welfare departments). The interviews were conducted by trained public opinion researchers. The use of a structured questionnaire coupled with pre-research training was used to minimise bias. 30+ household heads were interviewed in each of the 20 locations selected for the selected institutions, making a sample of 677 households. Half of these were selected as PA employees or social welfare recipients the other half were close neighbours.

Full details of methodology and the questions are provided at the end of this document.

Narrative digest of the results of the two survey

What effect has the combined AID blockade and Tax revenue freeze had on households? We asked adults who are household heads or significant income earners in cities in Gaza and the West Bank.

86.6% of people interviewed in Gaza and 81% of those interviewed in the West Bank say their household income has been reduced. In Gaza 52.7% say their household income reduced more than a half and 20.6% say their household income has stopped altogether. Slightly fewer in the West Bank (41.7% and 14.3%), report this level of impact. Overall 51% household heads and significant adults say workers take more time off work and 23.6% say workers in their households have stopped work. Once again the figures are slightly higher in Gaza.

What have households done?

51.6% say their household has gone into debt, more in Gaza (55%), 16.5% say they have sold possessions, less in Gaza. 8.5% say they have cut down on health care less in Gaza where UNRWA provides a greater proportion of services, 7.5% say they have stopped sending children to school. In Gaza 8% say they have cut down on food, in West Bank it is 2.3%

Has access to services been affected?

88% of people interviewed say access to services has been affected, 52% have reduced by more than a half including 8.6% who have stopped altogether. In Gaza 14.3% of the household heads interviewed say they no longer have any access to services. In the West Bank 32.8% say they now pay for services while in Gaza 10.9% now pay.

We asked household heads and other significant adults if they had received payment of salaries or welfare payments through the Temporary International Mechanism (referred to locally as the European payments). For those 356 who reported they had received payments we asked when they had been paid.

Overall 25% received payments before Sept 06, in West Bank 21.5% and in Gaza 31.3%. In the next three months between Sep 06 and Nov 06, 70% overall received payments, 75.3% in the West Bank and 63.4% in Gaza. In the following three months, between Dec 06 and Feb 07, the proportion fell to 44.6% in the West Bank and 25.2% in Gaza.

Oxfam Note: When questioned by Oxfam about the results of this last question the European Commission stated that they had made payments to Gaza and the rest of the West Bank over the past few months.

For the people who received payments 10% say they met all household needs. 27% say it met more than half their household needs and 63% say it met less than half their needs.

We asked, ‘what do you think the next few weeks holds for the situation of the Palestinians?’

Overall in West Bank and Gaza 29% think it will improve, 28% think it won’t change and 40% think it will be worse. Interviewees in Gaza were slightly less optimistic than those in West Bank.

We asked directors and senior managers in hospitals, schools, water utilities and other public sector institutions what the effect of the combined AID blockade and Tax revenue freeze had been,

Across the sectors 87% say their organization’s work has been disrupted, 48% say their organization’s work has been disrupted by more than a half and 9% say their organization’s work has stopped altogether. Within their institutions 51% say workers take more time off work while 7% say workers don’t come to work at all and 7% say the quality of work is poorer. Finally, 2% say they have laid workers off.

This disruption has affected services in the view of 86% of the directors and senior managers interviewed. 54% say their services have been reduced by more than a half, including 4% who have stopped services altogether.

These service directors and managers believe 45% of previous service users have gone elsewhere and 54% have not used services.

We asked these public sector service directors and senior managers if they had received finance through the Temporary International Mechanism.

Of those surveyed 50% have received finance through the TIM, 50% have not. Those who have received payments reported that 16% received payments before Sept 06, 66% between Sep 06 and Nov 06 and 53% between Dec 06 and Feb 07. In comparison, non TIM payments were received before Sept 06 by 48% of those institutions getting assistance, between Sep 06 and Nov 06 by 44% and between Dec 06 and Feb 07 by 17%. This may suggest that the sources of non TIM assistance may be getting exhausted.

Of those directors and senior managers receiving payments through the TIM, 3% say the payments met all the needs of their staff, 13% say the TIM payments met more than half their staff’s needs and 84% say it met less than half their staff’s needs.

With regard to services, 22% of directors and senior managers receiving TIM finances say it met more than half their service needs, 62% say it met less than half their service needs and 16% say it didn't help at all.

We also asked the public sector service directors and senior managers if they had received finances from other sources?

71% of public sector service directors and senior managers interviewed had not received finances or other assistance from other sources, 29% said they had. Of those who had received assistance said 74% of payments were for no salary, non fuel purposes. 47% of these directors and senior managers said the payments were of no help to staff, 52% said the payments met less than half their service needs.

We asked public sector service directors and senior man, 'what do you think the next few weeks holds for the situation of the Palestinians?'

Of the 67 directors and senior managers interviewed 42% think the situation will improve, 22% think it won't change and 29% think it will get worse. This is a more optimistic outlook than the one expressed by household heads and significant adults.

Research Methodology

Two linked surveys were used to elicit the experiences of public sector institution directors and senior managers and the experiences of household heads and other significant adults. The sample selection was a randomised purposive sampling. The results are interpreted to reflect the different experiences of the various groups surveyed. They do not give a picture of the distribution of experiences within the general population, this is not a cross sectional survey.

A face to face interview using a structured questionnaire administered to 60-70 key informants in the upper management cadre of essential Palestinian public sector institutions (hospitals, municipalities, schools, water utilities, welfare departments). The interviews were conducted by trained public opinion researchers. The use of a structured questionnaire coupled with pre-research training was used to minimise bias. 30+ household heads were interviewed in each of the 20 locations selected for the selected institutions, making a sample of 600-700. Half of these were selected as PA employees or social welfare recipients the other half were close neighbours.

The institutional questionnaire was pilot tested on 5 interviewees. The household questionnaire was pilot tested on 10 interviewees. If necessary the questionnaires will be modified.

The results were analysed using SPSS statistical package.

The interviewers were trained in interview techniques and standardisation and were supervised during the pilot and the survey interviews.

Sample selection. 12 senior managers were identified by the researcher in each of the 5 sector institutions (hospitals, municipalities, schools, water utilities, welfare departments). 7 of each 20 will be from the West Bank and 5 from Gaza. The households will be selected from areas that where employees and service users of the institutions selected live. Purposive random sampling of the PA employee and social welfare recipients will be used. Paired neighbouring households of similar size (+ or _ 1 person) will be selected.

Sector institutions were selected from a random selection of municipalities with more than 50,000 people. In each selected institution five senior managers – the Director, the Assistant Director, a senior technical manager, a senior administrative manager and a senior finance manager were approached for interview. Random selection used a table of the eligible municipalities or governates, selecting by means of three random numbers between 1 and 9 and two random letters between A and C for each of the five sectors.

For each sector, household heads were selected by a random approach to workers leaving the institutions whose directors or senior managers had been interviewed. The matched household heads were selected at random from the neighbourhoods where the workers said they predominantly live.

The gender of the interviewer was recorded on each interview form as well as a unique identifier so that the forms can be analysed for interviewer bias.
