SCHOOLS OF SANCTUARY: GIVING A WARM WELCOME

Resource Overview

Schools of Sanctuary: Giving a Warm Welcome supports young people to consider the importance of values like being welcoming and kind in relation to refugees and asylum seekers, and respecting human rights.

By using the resource young people will consider questions such as:
- Why do refugees leave their homes to seek asylum?
- What conditions do asylum seekers face?
- Do you think the UK should be welcoming and supportive to asylum seekers?

They will then use the structure provided to review how welcoming their school is, and to consider measures for improvement. The ultimate aim of the resource is to encourage young people to initiate a process towards their school becoming a School of Sanctuary thereby starting a longer term programme of work.

Schools of Sanctuary is just one of the work streams the City of Sanctuary network. City of Sanctuary is a movement committed to building a culture of hospitality and welcome for all, and especially for refugees seeking sanctuary from war and persecution.

This resource, and the School of Sanctuary concept, is relevant to diverse and more homogenous school communities alike. All schools can:
- Create a sense of safety and inclusion for all
- Develop understanding of what it means to seek sanctuary
- Dispel negative myths and stereotypes
- Provide learning opportunities around human rights, social justice, diversity and interdependence
- Strengthen race equality and community cohesion work
- Increase student voice and promote active citizenship

Schools of Sanctuary – Giving a Warm Welcome is an empowering resource that invites young people to take action in the arena over which they have the most control – their school and their social circles.
This resource is suitable for curriculum-based classroom learning but it has been written primarily for Oxfam’s Youth Ambassador Groups. Youth Ambassadors meet in their own time (with the support of a teacher) to learn together about global issues, whilst developing the skills and the confidence to make their voices heard. If you are using this resource in an extra-curricular setting then we suggest you register as a Youth Ambassador Group. Registered groups gain access to our structured award scheme, badges and certificates, newsletters, all the latest resources and one-to-one support by phone and email.

Asylum seekers and refugees

Exploring the topic of asylum in the UK is an effective way to put themes such as justice, conflict, poverty and human rights into a specific, localised context. For example, the image below was drawn by a year five child from Highfield Primary School in Leeds as an artistic response to a talk by a refugee who had had to cross a river containing crocodiles. This left a huge impression on the children, many of whom replicated that same account in their responses.

Teachers can access first-hand accounts of refugees’ stories and case studies through local refugee organisations and the teaching resources referenced at the end of this guide. Additionally, in our multi-cultural society, issues around diversity and acceptance of people from a wide range of backgrounds will be highly relevant to school communities and to young people as individuals. The current Mediterranean migrant crisis only increases the pertinence of the topic.

It is a human right to seek asylum, and the UK has to follow international law and grant asylum to those with a well-founded fear of returning home. In 2013, the UK received 23,507 new applications for asylum\(^1\). (Although this number may sound high this accounts for only a small proportion of total net migration: between 2004 and 2012, asylum ranged from 4% to 11% of net migration\(^2\)). However, the UK is a comparatively tough place to secure refugee status. In 2012, 30% of the people who applied for asylum in the UK were granted it. In some countries, such as Switzerland and Finland, over 70% of applications succeed\(^3\).

Asylum seekers and refugees use their education and skills to enrich society. Albert Einstein, Bob Marley, Michael Marks (who co-founded Marks and Spencer) and Rita Ora are among the best known examples – but less famously, thousands more refugees are making valuable contributions to the well-being of their communities across the country. Schools play a very important part in maximising this contribution, especially as so many refugees and asylum seekers are of school age. When a school creates a safe and welcoming environment for every student (not just for asylum seekers and refugee students) then everyone can thrive and reach their potential. This is the ultimate aim of this resource.
